NEW CLINICAL DATA: SCOUT Localization of Metastatic Axillary Lymph Node Prior to Neoadjuvant Chemotherapy for Targeted Axillary Dissection

A very compelling study that demonstrates myriad benefits of placing SCOUT in a suspicious axillary node PRIOR to the administration of Neoadjuvant Chemotherapy (NAC) to assist with Targeted Axillary Dissection (TAD) at surgery. It reinforces the features that differentiate SCOUT - minimal migration and minimal MRI artifact.

SCOUT is the only solution for localizing suspicious nodes in the axilla as outlined in this study – the reflectors remained secure with all placements, whereas two of the biopsy clips migrated. The reflector did not interfere with NAC clinical response MRI imaging. All reflectors were successfully placed and retrieved.

COMING SOON!

Expanding utility to treat more patients. With a 33% reduction in overall length of the reflector, the Mini is designed to increase utility for localizing lymph nodes, soft tissue and smaller targets.
